Jupiter/Saturn Aspect

First Half of September 2008

Greetings Family and Friends:

It's been a long time since we've had a newsletter out – May, in fact. That's because nothing of interest aspect-wise has been going on.

But with September comes a new "season" of aspects to energize us. In fact, this month there are two very different ones taking place. The first one is the Jupiter and Saturn aspect, which officially starts September 1, is the strongest on September 8, then eases off and finishes on the 17th.

This half of the month is the time for missions and we don't mean the type that dot the landscape of California and have bells ringing and incense burning. Instead we're talking about the type of mission for our lives and the life of the planet. It is a very conscientious time to have a really good vision on where we are going.

At the end of November 2008 there will again be a few days when we will also get this vibration or astrological time for missions. That will be the last time for five years. So we have two more chances to take advantage of this time and to put energy into planning projects that will go along with our mission in life and for the planet.

Think Big! It is a very successful time for planning for big things, for our whole life, for the whole planet. Very large projects can be designed and incorporated for the things that we feel should be done.

Google the Planets. I could go on and on with my interpretations of Jupiter and Saturn, and I will in my upcoming book, along with the other 44 aspects, but it will be better for us to see what other astrologers have to say about it. The easiest way to get their opinions is to 'Google' it. Below is a Quick Start of how to do this for all of you computer whizzes, along with complete instructions for the rest of us.

It is important to read these various interpretations by a wide variety of astrologers to see what resonates with us; what successful memories in our past they bring up; what we need to do with our lives now; and where we want to go. Reading these interpretations can tap into our conscience which will gently prod us to get going! The readings will give us ideas of what the successes of others, and at the same time give us a bird's eye view of our past experiences and how to apply this for future accomplishments.

Make a List - Also it is important to list the big things we would like to plan for our lives in the next five years. That's the very next time after the second half of November 2008 that this Jupiter/Saturn aspect happens again. When we have decided what projects we are going to accomplish in the next five years, then make we can set definite, measurable, attainable goals with a timetable.

If we feel overwhelmed by the goals, we can try dividing them up into smaller attainable steps. We could even make them tiny daily goals. After finishing this, we can post our overall goal and sub-goals in a place where we'd look at them daily. We also can read them out loud for the next five years or until they have been achieved. And achieve them we will, if we plan them during this time period.

So let's Google! Why? It's just a high tech way to jog our conscience to set ourselves up for the next five years with a mission and then search the Internet some more for the projects towards that end. That process could also include finding experiences others have had similar to our experiences and mission.

Quick Start: How to Google the Jupiter & Saturn Aspect

1. Start a Google search (www.google.com) by typing in "Jupiter Trine Saturn" (place the words in quotes) in the search box and there will be about 11 thousand hits!

2. Just get the essence of the aspect by extracting words, phrases, ideas that resonate with what you need to do for the upcoming 5 years to be successful. Ignore all the verbiage that focuses on negative information.
3. Keep searching the same phrase every day, taking the next page of hits, until you have a clear view of our life's plan.

Full Instructions – Googling the Jupiter & Saturn Aspect

1. Follow instructions 1 and 2 above.
2. After finishing with the first page of hits, hit the back arrow and go back to the Google search page of results for the next hit.
3. If the next hit listed is the same as the one just visited, skip it. Notice also that the color of the font changes when a site has recently been visited.
4. If you reach a site where it is not clear where the Jupiter Trine Saturn aspect is, hold down CTRL and tap the letter f (for “find”) and a pop-up window appears. Type in: “Jupiter Trine Saturn,” (not in quotation marks this time) and then click on Next. It will search and find the references and will highlight them.
5. After you browse all the hits on the first page you can go on to the next page or if you prefer, the next day, continue on and do the next page, and keep doing one page every day.
6. Remember to Google everyday from Sept 1-17 or until your plan is complete.

The next newsletter in a couple of weeks will be for the second half of September and will have decidedly different potentials. Getting excited?

Many blessings and we'd love to hear from you!
